In November, the city held a contest to help kick start its “City Inspired” campaign with city employees. They were asked describe what inspires them about the City of LaGrange on camera. They had 10-30 seconds to video their responses.

Three local judges including Alicia Hill from the LaGrange Daily News, Jeremy Andrews from the Troup County News, and Jennifer Shook from the Lafayette Society for Performing Arts were asked to pick a winner. Participants were judged based on originality, sincerity, and overall appeal.

Brown received a gift basket, an official certificate for winning the 2017 “City Inspired” employee competition, and a day off of work.

“You can just feel his pride in the city.”

And after 44 years of dedication – the City of LaGrange is truly inspired by Tommy Brown.
